Big Sister, Long Coat

"I love this book because life has a funny habit of never turning out quite the way we expect it to. The secret is to make the most of whatever comes our way, even if it looks like rain."

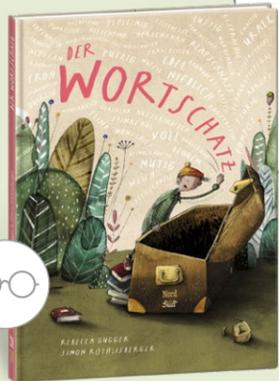

Andrew Rushton
Associate Publisher

Worm's Lost and Found

"If only we had a lost and found like the worm does the next time we lose keys, phone, or our favorite mug! A really fun story about how sometimes a change of perspective (and a good friend!) is exactly what you need."

Hanna Lang
Rights and Licensing Director

The Word Treasure

"Imagine if you could throw the word 'chocolaty' at your computer screen and in no time, it would be dark and delicious to nibble on. Wouldn't that be the perfect place to work? For me, at least, it would be a dream!"

Laetitia Hasler
Rights and Licensing Manager

The Flower Seller

"With moving illustrations, Anne-Christin Plate tells the story of a special friendship and focuses on those who are not noticed in everyday life."

Sindhya Bergamin

Picture Day at Dino Play

"The dino kindergartners are back! Little triceratops Frida stole my heart with her kindness in this volume. She proves that generosity and friendship bring joy."

Lena Dempewulf

Dear friends and partners,

Frankfurt Book Fair is once again just around the corner—how come time always seems to simply fly by? We look forward to seeing you and giving you a look at our lost-in-day-dreamy and woodland-soft list for the first half of 2024.

Not sure what those words mean? Well, meet Oscar. Oscar finds a treasure chest full of words. Not sure what to do with them, he throws them around and runs out very quickly. In the end, he learns how to simply create new words himself. Really something we all should be doing more often.

Our books for spring are about time as well, whether it's two sisters enjoying spending a day together, whatever the weather, or a little caterpillar pupating and turning into a beautiful butterfly just as she should. Little cloud Rae learns all about her purpose within the passing rain cycle, and a little boy meets a flower seller on the street, who he misses dearly when time passes and she disappears one day.

Also, has anyone seen our hat? We wanted to wear it for picture day ... Maybe it's on page 9. Or on page 13.

With our very best and spring-freshest wishes,

Your
NordSüd Foreign Rights Team

Hanna, Lena, Laetitia, Sindhya, and Andrew

P.S.: Did you spot the imaginative German words on the cover? We wanted to showcase all the fun your translators are going to have with this book. To find out what it's all about, have a look at The Word Treasure on the next page!

Big Sister, Long Coat

Two girls spend a day together in the big city. They have a plan. But it is constantly foiled: the ice cream melts in the heat; it starts raining cats and dogs, the library is already closing. Fortunately, the older girl is prepared for everything. Nothing works out as planned, but in the end, everything turns out ... better!

French-American author Nelly Buchet tells the story from the perspective of the younger girl, who looks up to the older one. Rachel Katstaller's pictures capture the atmosphere of a modern big city.

For everyone with a great big sister, younger friend, cool neighbor, little cousin ...

Nothing can ruin the perfect day

Snappy text celebrating being together

Nelly Buchet

grew up in Paris. She holds a degree in philosophy from Canada's McGill University. She won the Irma Black Award for Excellence in Children's Literature for her debut Cat Dog Dog. Nelly Buchet is a member of the Society of Children's Book Writers and Illustrators and lives in Berlin.

Rachel Katstaller

was born in El Salvador. She studied Strategic Design and attended the Summer School for Illustration at New York's School of Visual Arts. In 2019, NordSüd published her first picture book, Ada and the Number-Crunching Machine. Rachel Katstaller lives in Innsbruck.

A Cloud Called Rae
40 pages / 21.5 × 28 cm
Age: 4+
Sales price: € 17
Publication: April 2024

Martina Liebig
was born in Hamburg. She also studied there, at the University of Applied Sciences and graduated with a master's degree in illustration in 2017. A Cloud Called Rae is her first picture book with NordSüd. Martina Liebig lives in Hamburg.

Ixtzel Arreola
grew up in the southern Mexican jungle, on the border with Guatemala. She works as a traditional midwife. In her spare time, she writes children's books and takes care of her plants and animals. A Cloud Called Rae is her first picture book.

Little cloud Rae desperately wants to be big. An older cloud explains to her how to achieve that. Rae moves through the country, takes in water from lakes, rivers, and the morning dew, and finds a friend in a flower. Rae grows and grows until she has become too full and pours down on the land as welcome rain.

At first, Rae seems light and transparent, as if dabbed into the sky. By accompanying her growth, we come to understand the cycle of cloud formation and rain. Mexican author Ixtzel Arreola has succeeded in wrapping this natural phenomenon in a child-friendly, engaging story. Martina Liebig's images celebrate the drama of South American landscapes.

Worm's Lost and Found

New Picture Books

New Picture Books

Worm's Lost and Found is one of the best in the world.

The worm has a rare talent for finding things. The absent-minded seal comes by almost every day because he has lost something. But then the unthinkable happens: the thoroughly reliable worm can't find his hat!

We are often quite scatterbrained. Where is my cell phone? Where is the second sock? Who has seen my teddy bear, without which I can't sleep? The grand duo worm and seal teach us that the world doesn't end when such things happen. Jule Wellerdiek's first book for NordSüd helps children accept loss and at the same time celebrates the joy of recovery.

Because children lose things all the time

About searching and finding lost things

A worm as the main character makes for a nice change

Jule Wellerdiek

was born in Bielefeld, Germany. After studying design at Münster University of Applied Sciences, she is now a freelance illustrator and devotes herself to what she loves to do most: come up with stories and turn them into pictures, preferably with lots of quirky characters and details. Her debut Holger's House, was published in 2022. Jule Wellerdiek lives in Bochum.

The caterpillar and the earthworm are neighbors who like to chat with each other. One day, the caterpillar suddenly starts spinning. The earthworm thinks his friend has gone crazy, but she is simply following her intuition. Because the earthworm holes himself up underground, he misses how the caterpillar turns into a butterfly.

Andrew Bond's story, which is both humorous and profound, is effectively staged through Julie Völk's clever visual concept. With each turn of the page, we expand our view (literally!) and take in a new perspective. Until we float high in the air with the butterflies.

Listen to your intuition and the world will open up for you

The first picture book by renowned Swiss singer-songwriter Andrew Bond published by NordSüd

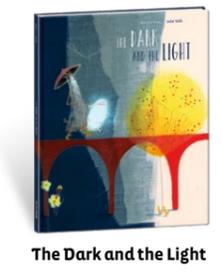

Artful watercolor paintings by award-winning illustrator Julie Völk

Andrew Bond
grew up in the DR Congo, in the North of England and since the age of 13 in Switzerland. He studied theology and taught at a senior high school for a long time. Today he writes children's songs and musicals and also works as an author. Children from several generations listen to and sing his songs at home, in kindergarten and at school. Andrew Bond lives in Wädenswil, Switzerland.

Julie Völk
was born in Vienna. She studied illustration at the HAW Hamburg. Völk's books have won many awards, including the Austrian Children's and Young People's Book Prize, the Troisdorf Picture Book Prize and from the Stiftung Buchkunst. Julie Völk lives and draws near Vienna.

Norman's First Day at Dino Day Care

Today is picture day at the dinosaur day care. Frida wears her favorite hat. But after lunch it is suddenly gone and Frida is distraught. All the dino kids help her look for it until they discover the hat in a tree: a bird has built its nest out of it! At first, she wants it back, but then Frida senses that the bird needs her favorite hat more than she does. For the photo shoot, she and her friends just make new colorful hats themselves!

Sean Julian's cute dino group is back in their second adventure after Norman's First Day. The lively story teaches even the youngest children that generosity makes you happy.

Bruno—Short Stories for Long Nights

Bruno has been hibernating comfortably, but now the bear family is waking up. After a long winter, leaves and grass are sprouting in the forest. Easter is just around the corner! For Bruno and his friends, that means painting Easter eggs. Mama Bear has an idea: she will hide the Easter eggs. For every egg found, there is a funny story.

In this follow-up to Bruno—Short Stories for Long Nights, Serena Romanelli tells animal stories with a springlike atmosphere for every situation. Hans de Beer creates fabulous illustrations full of situational comedy.

The Flower Seller

Every morning, the woman selling flowers comes to the corner at the intersection. She sits quietly on the ground, her flowers spread out in front of her, while people pass by without paying any attention. Vanja, on the other hand, is happy when he sees her. It may just be a wave, a smile, or a bouquet of flowers that he buys, but for Vanja and the flower seller, these encounters are special—quiet, but with enormous impact.

In cities, they are a common sight: people begging, trying to sell something. We don't know if they have a bed to sleep in at night. As adults, we usually just walk past them. But Vanja meets the flower seller at eye level. A plea for tolerance, an open mind and the chance for real encounters.

Today she lives in Marburg and works as an editorial director at kunstanstifter verlag. Together with Vitali Konstantinov she develops her own book projects.

Vitali Konstantinov was born in Ukraine and studied architecture, graphics, painting, and art history. For more than 20 years he has been writing and illustrating books, which have been published in 40 countries. In 2020 he was nominated for the German Youth Literature Prize. Vitali Konstantinov lives in Marburg, Germany, where he works as a freelance illustrator and author.

Ears can do much more than just pick up sound waves. In the animal kingdom, ears are sometimes the decisive advantage! The position of its ears helps a fleeing hare, for example, confuse and lose its pursuer. Some animals can close their ears to protect their bodies, or they can use their ears for cooling off. Whether they're long, tufted, or goblin ears, they all tell a lot about animals, their habits, and their habitats.

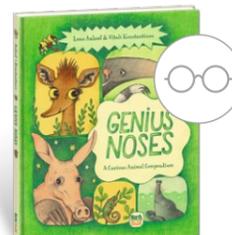

Lena Anlauf provides exciting insights into the animal kingdom for those who want to know everything. Vitali Konstantinov introduces us to the individual animals in impressive portraits. In doing so, he shows personalities with wit and a great love of detail.

Here comes the next ingenious book by Lena Anlauf and Vitali Konstantinov after their Genius Noses

Lizzy Longlegs

Lizzy Longlegs comes from a long line of musicians. But in the Longlegs house—floorboards, chandeliers, gold wallpaper—music is played with a stern face.

With her musical preferences, Lizzy dances to the beat of a different drummer. At home, no one understands her. How is she supposed to find like-minded friends? A festival is needed! Lizzy distributes flyers, and soon everything that has legs, wings, and music in its blood flock to Villa Longlegs. Lady B. Marie and Walter are the headliners. And even Lizzy's brother rocks the bagpipes in his tailcoat.

Kai Lüftner tells Lizzy's story in rousing, cool verses about music you really feel. Wiebke Rauers outdoes herself in the creation of the noble world of the Longlegs family and the exuberant hustle and bustle of the festival.

Mice that read

No one tells completely unspectacular stories as engagingly as Erwin Moser. He meets children at their own level of wild imagination, so that no mediation is necessary. Often something goes wrong in his “miniature stories,” but the solution is found immediately.

Erwin Moser’s works have been available without interruption since the 1990s, and the great impact of his little stories has delighted generations of children. These three stories continue the Mini Moser series at NordSüd.

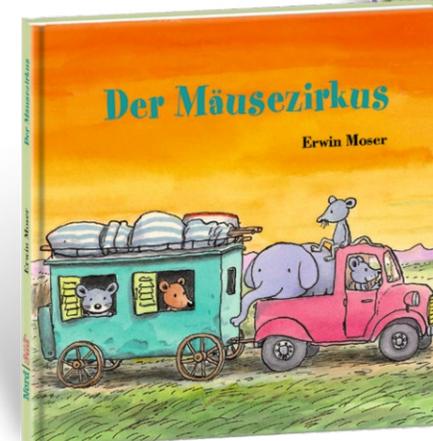

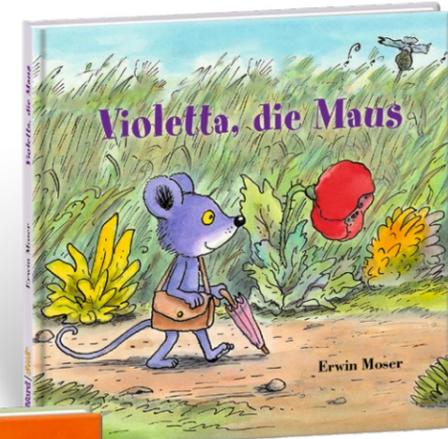

- The world is colorful and adventurous
- Imaginative stories, perfect for the youngest ones
- By Erwin Moser, the master of the short form

Erwin Moser was born in Vienna, Austria. He trained as a typesetter and began inventing and illustrating his own stories in 1980. In more than 30 years he published numerous children’s books, which are now part of the canon of German-language children’s and young adult literature. Erwin Moser died in 2017.

“Erwin Moser’s characters and stories are German picture book classics.”
